CHANCE LEADER IN ONE RESPECT

Manager Frank Chance, of the Yankees, takes rank as the greatest "firer and hirer" in baseball history. Since he took charge of the Yanks two years ago he has tried out-and found wanting-about 100 players. Chance is said to count that day lost in which he neither hires nor fires a player. However, he has counted very few in the lost column.

BINGLES AND BUNTS

By GRANTLAND RICE.

As It May Happen, "We'll strike!" yelled the angry players,

"We'll put our play on the shelves." "We'll quit," howled the irate magnates.

"We'll go on a strike ourselves." But while they were planning a walkout.

Before they had time to do it, They suddenly looked and found the fans

Had already beaten them to it. Final proof has now been established of the greatness of baseball—as a game. No other sport in existence could have stood one-fourth the hammering this game has received from both sides. It has been double-crossed up and down the line by both contingents, and, reeiing and staggering, is still making an effort to keen its feet.

Rocking the O. B. Boat.

Not since the days of the brotherhood has organized baseball been the recipient of so many rakish blows-both fore and aft. The players have shown at last that they are organized almost man, and are ready to go to any in defense of any stand they may limit in defense of any stand they may take. They have shown the fraternity has at last been rounded into a fighting army. On top of this the Feds have started winning all the big legal scrambles and establishing their various points in law. They have O. B. under a double fire. and O. B., after all its years of absolute control, isn't yet accustomed to being kicked on the shins by every passerby.

The Fraternity's Chance.

We believe the baseball fraternity can do the player a lot of good. It has already shown its ability to curb the arrogance of the National Commission and the unfairness of certain magnates. But while the magnates, many of them, But while the magnates, many of them, first set the example of money lust and commercialism, hasn't the fraternity a chance to protect the game by curbing

It has been charged openly that all five members of the directors, after approving their original contracts, held their employers up for more money. If this is true it is an absolute violation of good faith and upon a par with the sordidness charged to the magnates. If it is true, why has the fraternity stood for any such un-derhanded work?

If baseball were only attacked upon one side it would have a better chance of making a return fight. But when it is assaulted both in the front and in the state of the state the rear the odds are well nigh hope-for the Davis cun in the knowledge that only a very small per cent of the team will serve any ten-day notice of release upon the management before the first match is played. Also that only a meager per cent of the American team will impose to the Australian line-up and most of the Davis cup stuff will be settled out upon the field and not in a court of law.

| 150,000 will be deposited. Opposition is not expected from the authorities, as whatever speculation is indulged in will be conducted under the system of individual wagering, which is generally held to be legal. The racing will follow closely on the Maryland meetings, and will begin about December 10 and continue to the middle of March.

still has quite a chance left to round out a fair international summer by retaining his tennis and yachting cups. Victories in these two events, attached to Harvard's conquest at Henley would leave us in a fairly cheerful ed to Harvard's conquest at Henley, sout would leave us in a fairly cheerful frame of mind for the long gray winter ahead. But in neither undertaking is America rated with the edge. In both starts the British empire is conceded at least an even chance to win, and if there is any margin it would and if there is any margin it would probably be allotted to the Union Jack.

them as their once mighty warclubs seek in vain to lead an old-time assault. The game is a great one, but it pays back no favors and recognizes no past deeds. Its story is told in the box score of today.

Stovall's Training.

Stovall, the firebrand of the Feds, upo

Some one was complimenting George Stovall, the firebrand of the Feds, upon being in such excellent condition. "Weil, I ought to be in good shape," said Stovall, "I had the greatest spring training ever known to baseball. I chased 478 ball players through the corridors of 256 hotels before I collected my club."

In an ordinary season the possibility of the Boston Braves winning a pennant would never be considered. But 1914 is no ordinary season. It is a freak year through and through, and anything may happen with seventy games left to play. If any one had suggested back around the middle of May that Pittsburgh would be in last place by July 2), he could have wagered all the kale in the realm at his own odds. It would be a fitting climax to this unkempt year to have the club that was a hopeless tailender for the first two months to come on through to victory and then whale the paddins out of the Mackmen in October.

"Pittsburgh's slump," said McGraw recently, "is no record breaker. It is "Pittsburgh's slump," said McGraw recently, "is no record breaker. It is nothing to the slump of the Louisville club in 1892. That club won its first sixteen games and every one was howling that it outclassed the league, and would break up the race. And then it finished one of the poorest lasts in baseball history."

The wisenseimers responsible for the prediction base their belief on the fact that the local champion will go into the intercity series fresh from the reg-ular season's games, while the Rich-mond contender will have gone stale here. The Richmond season is about closed now, while six weeks or two months remain for the Capital sand-lotters to declare their king.

Members of the Richmond Amateur Association will come to Washington tomorrow to confer with President Robert H. Young, Secretary Harry Shurtleff, and Treasurer Charlie King. At their meeting, dates for the Richmond-Washington games will be arranged, and all of the details relative to the playing of them will also be decided upon.
